When she started teaching, she originally used Bastien, but she found that her students “learn how to process music and how to play more easily” with Faber & Faber. In her experience, the order in which certain subjects are taught within the Faber method makes it easier. Joy S. from Texas, however, favors both Bastien and Alfred. For her younger students, she recommends Bastien: “It’s better for younger students because it spends more time explaining the fundamentals.”
