The Waving Flag: Art De La Guerre Rulebook - An Improvement

L'Art de la Guerre is a ruleset which was originally developed in France, and had undergone a couple of editions before the 3rd edition was translated into English and published in English-speaking countries. The rules play like a combination of an updated, cleaned up DBM with an infusion of some of the elements of FoG.

Review of a first game with L'Art de la Guerre Carthaginians vs Republican Roman. Despite having helped (along with many of my clubmates) with the English translation of the "popular in France" ruleset L'Art de la Guerre, I'd never actually played a game... so, with the shiny new book now in the possession of myself and around 30 other Central London players, this needed to be rectified - and ...

Armies for tournaments are limited at 200 points (and a stand of Heavy Swordsman would cost 6 points per if of Mediocre Quality, 8 if Ordinary and 10 if Elite), but there are options for larger battles of 400 points per side or more.

Review: Art De La Guerre (3rd Edition) | Wargamer

Played a game of new (to English speaking world at least as this is version 3) French Ancients rules L'Art De La Guerre (LADG) at Stephens. I had dabbled briefly with rules months ago but this was first proper outing with them. We decided to go with 300pt armies (200pts is the normal/standard) to see how rules compared to Dbmm.
